Raising children in a family environment during them good and bad behavior about life, people's society it is necessary to give preliminary visions of his duties in front of him. Children's of incomparable importance is the assimilation of tradition and existing positive habits in the family.

The content of Ibn Sina's thoughts on family education and practical the significance can be learned from his statement: "child behavior special attention should be paid to keeping the child in moderation, to which the child is strict it is achieved by keeping it from anger, fear, sadness and insomnia. The child to immediately find what he wants and what is useful, as well as what he does not love it is necessary to always remain ready to move away from the eyes. There are two types of this work there are benefits. On the one hand, it has a positive effect on the psyche of the child, the child is the most from an early age, he grows up cheerful, and it is this habit of cheerfulness to him remains. On the second hand, it benefits the child's body, because bad when behavior becomes a habit, it causes a client disorder. For example, anger heats up strength, sadness shakes strength, sadness tends to innocence.

As a result of the mediocrity of behavior, both the soul and the body are healthy”. Berunius showing the reputation of parents and benevolent caregivers to child rearing he also reflects on his strength. Parents to their reputation before the eyes of the child in the family having, upbringing gives an effective result, emphasizes the great alloma. Reputation not given by nature, not artificially created, fear and intimidation for him, it is not achieved by force, but by virtue of kindness and consequence towards the parents it turns out.
