INTRODUCTION

Toponymics - Place names, i.e. the science that studies toponyms. Toponymy is concerned with the collection of geographical names, as well as the study of their origin and development, form, content, and grammatical structure. Jump to search ChJump to navigation Jump to navigation Mahmud Koshgari, Narshahi and Beruni were the first to do research on the names of places in Central Asia, and then Zahiriddin Muhammad Babur and Abulgazi Bahodirkhan Jump to search "The science of geographical names is an integral part of linguistics, linguistics is representative of geography, and geographical names are part of the structure of a dictionary language, subject to specific laws. Geographical names have a rather static and stable character, they reign for a long time, and therefore they can be added to the category of historical monuments. Geographical names (toponyms) describe a geographical point and concept in such a way that the place designated by it is not interchangeable with other places, that is, toponyms Geographic is the clearly defined residence (address) of the point"

There is a saying among our people that even if a lake dries up, its name will not dry up. This is not said in vain. Disambiguation pages with short descriptions And names are given by man to things and events. These names will remain as a product of history for a thousand years or more. Jump to search It is in these sources that names are kept. Jump to search In some cases, the places themselves may disappear and be liquidated for various reasons. Jump to search Since Pirmkul Kadyrov's novel Bobur is devoted to a historical theme, Boburnoma serves as the main source for its realistic depiction of history. The Boburnameh is a historical monument and contains sufficient information about the roads, places, cities, and villages that Babur traveled. In a word, the geography of a vast territory is illustrated by fiction. This disambiguation page lists articles associated with the title Disambiguation.
